field uses biofeedback to create a new vision of what it is to be human.

NOMENON: ME AND BFT--What happens when a physiologist learns to power a model train with her brain waves.

SECTION II--SKIN TALK: A STRANGE MIRROR OF THE MIND--How the electrical language of the skin can reflect moods and expose secret personality.

SECTION III--TEACHING MUSCLES TO WORK FOR THE MIND--Muscle control through biofeedback can lead to startling changes in consciousness and awareness, and reveal human will in the control of a single nerve cell.
SECTION IV--HEARTBEAT AND BLOOD PRESSURE: ACTS OF WILL--The mind can relieve illnesses as well as create them; new techniques offer hope for hypertensive patients.

WAVES FROM THE BRAIN--Alpha
waves can be an aid to meditation or treatment for neurosis;
besides, they feel good.

applications of biofeedback to education, medicine and therapy

Caplan, Nathan and Stephen D. Nelson, WHO'S TO BLAME? Vol. 8, No. 6, Nov. 1974, pp. 99-104. When social scientists seek the causes of society's illness in the behavior of individuals, they wind up blaming the victims instead of changing the conditions responsible for the problem.

Chesney-Lind, Meda, JUVENILE DELINQUENCY: THE SEXUALIZATION OF FEMALE CRIME, Vol. 8, No. 2, July 1974, pp. 43-46. The sexual double standard infests the juvenile justice system. Many courts routinely test girls suspected of theft for VD and often institutionalize young females to protect them against lives of sin.

Studies of professional diplomats indicate that self-confident men with an itch to be influential are likely to drop a bomb when crisis threatens. A nation that wants to stay out of war should look for self-confident men who harbor no private fantasies of power.

Foreign policy and football games are easy to figure out afterwood, but users of hindsight tend to manipulate facts, forget equally likely possibilities, and view all results as inevitable. This habit distorts our view of the future.

SCIENTISTS MAKE ONE GREAT DIS-COVERY; JAMES OLDS HAS MADE TWO.
Vol. 8, No. 12, May 1975, p. 44.

that a tickle of electricity can give more pleasure than sex. For an encore, he's tracked the changes in the brain that go along with learning.

Maxey, PURSUIT OF INTELLECTUAL ORGASM, Vol. 8, No. 10, March 1975, pp. 68-77. A conversation with Frank Beach, animal behaviorist. His careful research asks why male dogs lift their legs, why bitches reject some males, whether impotence follows castration, and why an excess of male hormones makes rats effeminate.
The answers have human implica-

Research indicates, however, that the way we give our aid shapes the way the recipient acts. Applying typical Washington logic, the U. Each index entry gives the item title, its author(s), the magazine department in which the item appeared, the month and year of issue and the page number on which the item begins. When more than one item appears under a single index entry, the items are arranged in inverse chronological order, most recent item first. In particular, the

EDITORIAL INDEX references all main articles, regular columns and features including Newsline and Letters. Letters pertaining to a particular item are listed under the item's title entry. Author replies are listed under the author's name. And the BOOK REVIEW INDEX references all Book Reviews, Review Briefs and articles that dealt primarily with books and literature. Entries are by book title, book author, book reviewer and subject insofar as could be determined from the review itself. Books are also classified as to Autobiographies, Biographies, Children's Literature, Fiction and Science Fiction. Letters pertaining to book reviews are listed under the book title entry.

Editorial

and Book Review

Index: Volume X.

June 1976 – May 1977

THIS INDEX . . .

consists of two parts; an Editorial Index and a Book Review Index, both of which reference the entire twelve-issue volume noted on the Index cover. Both Indexes are single continuous listings of titles, authors and topics arranged in alphabetical order. Each index entry gives the item title, its author(s), the magazine department in which the item appeared, the month and year of issue and the page number on which the item begins. When more than one item appears under a single index entry, the items are arranged in inverse chronological order, most recent item first. In particular, the

EDITORIAL INDEX references all main articles, regular columns and features including Newsline and Letters. Letters pertaining to a particular item are listed under the item's title entry. Author replies are listed under the author's name. And the

BOOK REVIEW INDEX references all Book Reviews, Review Briefs and articles that dealt primarily with books and literature. Entries are by book title, book author, book reviewer and subject insofar as could be determined from the review itself. Books are also classified as to Autobiographies, Biographies, Children's Literature, Fiction and Science Fiction. Letters pertaining to book reviews are listed under the book title entry.
